Reviews

This type of publication is every thing and helped me seeking ahead and much more. It usually fails to charge too much. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

MANAGING RISK IN EXTREME ENVIRONMENTS: FRONT-LINE BUSINESS LESSONS FOR CORPORATES AND FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Kogan Page Limited/Viva Books, 2008. Softcover. Book Condition: New. First edition. High-profile disasters, from floods to terrorist attacks, appear in our newspapers and on our TV screens almost daily. However, the coverage rarely mentions risk or risk management. How do people and organizations really manage risk in such extreme circumstances? ? You're an infectious disease consultant on an isolation ward in Toronto and your "atypical pneumonia" patient isn't responding to antibiotics. ? You're off duty when the reactor melts down and you have to replace your boss who is in hospital with radiation poisoning. ? You're the first emergency services personal on the platform after a bomb explodes on the London Underground and you have to decide who to save. When it really is a matter of life and death, how do risk management strategies stand up to the pressure? And do these radical situations have a practical relevance for risk management policies in today's business and financial worlds? Managing Risk in Extreme Environments looks at real-life examples and case studies ? from epidemics and terrorism to floods and earthquakes ? in order to extract risk management practices that have been tested in adverse conditions and shown to succeed. In drawing out such practices, Duncan Martin shows how these vital lessons can be transferred effectively to the less extreme operational environments in which most of us work. Managing Risk in Extreme Environments offers an informative and gripping account of how risk management works in extreme situations. The author presents nine case studies of risk management strategies and practices in extreme environments: novel epidemics, wildfires, terrorism, extreme humanitarian aid, mountain rescue, nuclear reactors, extractive industries, floods and earthquakes. These authoritative case studies provide a detailed assessment of the similarities and differences between these environments, and also a comparison with risk management...
